A RESOURCE HANDBOOK II

FOLK ARTS

IN EDUCATION

Folk Arts in Education: A Resource Handbook II examines the state of folklife and folk art in education projects around the U.S. with sample curricula from over 50 exemplary programs for youth in educational settings in K–12 schools, youth-serving organizations, arts and humanities councils, museums, and cultural heritage and folk arts nonprofit organizations.

Folklife programs in schools and after-school programs bring young people in touch with their communities, their ethnic identities, the authentic cultural expressions of their own families and others through direct participation and ethnographic methods using photography, video, radio, audio recordings, exhibitions, festivals, and residencies with tradition-bearers. A web resources section links educators to folk arts programs nationwide.
